IMPORTANCE OF THE ONE-TERM PRINCIPLE. ost fatal defects of our institutions. The evils of it can rest in the reflection of Gen. Grant. Of course they se large sums of money, and they electioneer all over country. In saying this, I do not refer to any officers of this State or of New-England. We must have an amendment to the Constitution limiting the President to shake SPILICH OF ALBERMAN WHEELESL Mr. Pettingill here called upon Alderman Nathaniel Whoder, who said he had simply come to perform a duty that in his opinion devolved on every patriot and citizen of our hard, which was to tell the people that he was for honest Hornes Greeley. The people of this country, he said, were not satisfied with the administration of their Government affairs, a statement which was heartily corroborated, if the lemenstrations of approval by the audience were any criterion; and the people, he added, were going now to change the management and take it into their own hands, and when they had done H, no more would be heard of and when they had done it, no more would be heard of Ku-Kinx, or of standing armies. [Applause.] There would then be nothing out peace and pienty once more in the land. [Applause.] it was not one of those who lay all me fault upon teen. Grant's shoulders, for he was not entirely to blane. The difficulty, said he, is that team to an inefficient statesman, and bad men have not the control of man, and they keep the control of him. and if you put him, back in the Presidential coair, they will control him still more during the next four years. [Applause, and cries of "That's so."] I am asked. "Can you, as an oin-line, life-long permoveral, vote for Hornec Greeiey is not the candidate of penilical wire puliers. [Applause.] He is not the candidate of the politicians of our country. Politicians went to Cincinnati and did all they could to defeat his nonmation, but the people were there as well—[applause]—and they refused to be controlled by the politicians. They said, "We will honor a mind of our own choice." and they node the platform, Horace Greeiey stepped up and swore, like a true and loyal man, to stand there and fight the battle of the people. [Loud and prolonged applause.]

GREELEY'S FINANCIA POLICY.

GREELEY'S FINANCIAL POLICY.

Now I feel it my duty to support the people's candidate, and I am going to do it, notwithstanding there are some old creakers who pertend financial ruin if be is placed in the Presidential chair. That is all nonsence. Who are the present officers who are striving to perpetuate their power. They are Grant and Boutwell. What does Grant know of this great financial question t. Where has he ever shown his hand in the finances of the nation, except one notable exception, which is familiar to all as Black Priday," a day that brought ruin to "Black Priday," a day that brought ruin to many homest ment (Applanse). Connected with this transaction are Butterfield and dorbin, the latter one of Grant's numerons "family." Way do you pay so much for your coats and your boots, working mant Is it not because of the heavy taxes, and are not those neavy taxes imposed so that Boutwell may pay of the debt in a hurry, and this gain a reputation for absenty and abolity! Horace Greeley has studied public men and public things all his life, and at the same time has worked up from a poor boy to the leadership of the greatest public journal in our whole land. (Applanse and cheers.) Both financially and commercially a success. Is I possible, then, that he is going to rain this country when he has during his life won a permanent reputation for his sargeity in financial as well as all other questions! But you not believe he will call around him for his Cabinet the most able and axperienced statesment I helieve it will be the strongest Cabinet this country has ever seen; and as in this, so in every other department of the Government. [Applanse]. It he has every reasons for supporting abinet this country has ever seen; and as in this, so in every other department of the Government, fapinase. These are my reasons for supporting im, and I believe every freeman dissatisfied with the resent administration will case his bailof for him in lovember next. Will you do it! [Cries of "Yes!" times made as a matter of policy, but you all know that Horace Greeley is a man who means just what he says, and when you make a platform, and put him on it, he will stick to it, and carry out his principles. (Applanee.) I have known him 30 years, and known him intimately, and I don't believe it is possible to find in the United States a man who believes he desires anything but the prosperity of this country, and I can vote for him because I know him to be honest and sensible. (Applanee.) Horace Greeley is never going back on that life of his. None of us have such a record to carry down to the stasm. Mr. Greeley came from New-York last evening, and is the guest of P. T. Barnum. Although his visit was one of no political signifi-cance, but the faililiment of a promise given long ago, yet he was prevailed upon at the urgent solicitations of his friends to receive them at the Atlantic Hotel at the conclusion of the meeting. The call for the meeting was signed by 125 Republican residents of Bridgeport and 119 Democrats, comprising the most neat and influential men of the city. The meeting at the Opera House in its extent surprised even the most confident of the genilemen who had been prominent in the movement. As they remarked the meeting was not at all in the nature of a ratification, but was simply called for the purpose of having a plain ome talk. None of the speakers were from abroad, but were all residents of Bridgeport and arnest workers in the cause of Reform, At 7; o'clock, when the meeting was called to order, the Opera House was crowded as never before. The nisles were compictely blocked up, and the stairs fined with a struggling crowd, and outside, the mass which could not gain an entrance was much larger than that which stamped and

At last Gen. Wm. H. Noble stepped forward and nominated for Chairman of the meeting Mr. A. A. Pettingill, who was the former editor of The Standard, a Republican paper, and now an Administration organ in this city. Mr. Pettingill read a long list of Vice-Presidents and ceretaries embracing names of significance, and the list was enthusiastically adopted. In accepting the chair-
